

West Virginia Oncology Society Membership

To be eligible for membership, an individual must be a physician licensed by the state of West Virginia with a stated specialty in hematology or oncology, or a clinical interest and/or practice pertaining to cancer patients.

The West Virginia Oncology Society (WVOS) is asking for support to achieve our mission. With your support, we will strive to promote excellence in the care of patients afflicted with cancer and hematological disorders.

We will ...

- Be active in the numerous health care issues facing cancer care providers, including reimbursement, practice management, off-label indications for chemotherapy pharmaceuticals and advocacy with managed care companies and policy makers.
- Offer educational seminars and meetings on various topics and trends in cancer care.
- Work closely with other national and state organizations to accomplish our objectives.
- Keep our members informed of the important changes occurring in Medicare with newsletters, frequent reimbursement alerts and upcoming reimbursement meetings. Our website will be available with important news and information and links to other informative sites.
- Work with other national organizations to analyze the impact of the changes on patient care and keep members of Congress informed of those issues.

Membership dues are $300.00 annually per fulltime physician.*

*All full time physicians in an oncology group practice must maintain membership in the Society to receive full WVOS privileges. Full members have the right to attend Board and Membership meetings, vote for the election of Board members and officers, serve on committees and hold elective office. Compliant practices' administrator, nurses and billers are also included in membership and are entitled to attend meetings and participate in webinars and audio conferences sponsored by the society at no charge.

By joining the society you will help us promote excellence in the care of cancer patients.
